The Biopic In Contemporary Film

Transcript. Because they see the biopic as this very conventional cradle-to-grave formula, a film that has to cover the whole life of the character, the whole life of the person, whereas the kind of film-making they are interested in is not this kind of classical film-making. The thing is that, when we were doing our research,...

One of the reasons for the revival was the shift of the biopic from the producer to the director, the auteur. Raging Bull, The Last Emperor, Tucker, and Malcolm X confirmed that the biopic had become the director's genre. The uniqueness of each film derived from the director's vision: Scorsese, Bertolucci, Coppola, Spike Lee.
